

Assistant Professor of Spanish

The College of Idaho invites applications for a tenure-track position in Spanish (specialty: Applied Linguistics or Sociolinguistics) beginning August 2018, housed in the Department of Modern Foreign Languages. The ideal candidate will be able to offer a wide range of courses, from Spanish language and culture to advanced linguistics. This hire will serve as the department's lower-division language coordinator, overseeing curricular coherence and proficiency assessment, and providing adjunct training. This hire will also strengthen opportunities for Service Learning in the Spanish major. MFL faculty share advising and administrative responsibilities, and Spanish faculty contribute to an interdisciplinary program in Latin American Studies.

Candidates should demonstrate interest in working with our diverse student population, including heritage and native speakers. Excellent teaching and mentoring of students are the highest priorities of the College. The successful candidate will also have an active scholarship agenda; the College provides a sabbatical leave program and professional development support for both teaching and research. The usual teaching load is 21 credits per year, which includes a course in the College's intensive January term, often used for faculty-led international courses. Ph.D. and native or near-native proficiency in Spanish and English are required.

Candidates must be authorized to work in the United States as of the expected hire date and throughout the date of the contract without sponsorship from The College of Idaho.
